The PERsonal facilitator: a challenge for VET

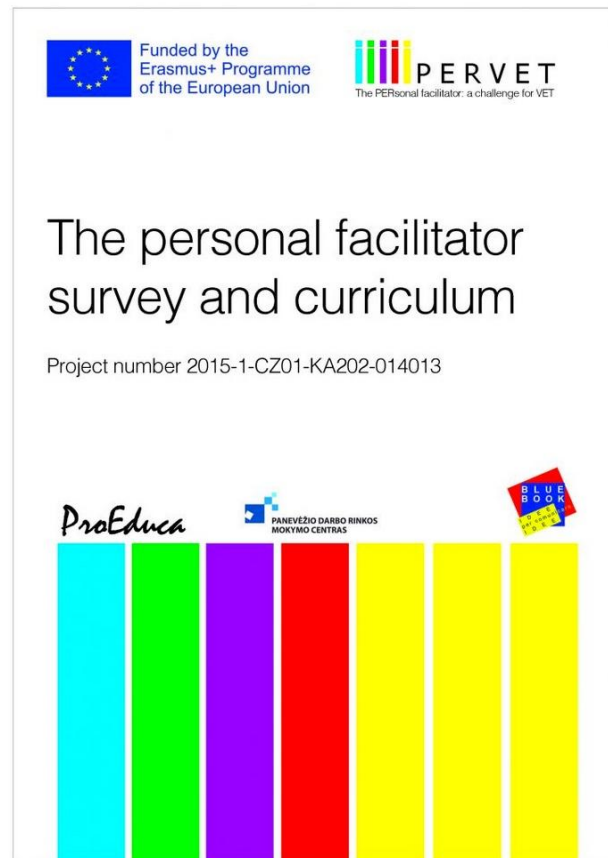

Goal achieved

Reconciliation tools and policies are currently being developed on widely-experienced channels - such as part-time work, teleworking, and flexibility of times - by means of affirmative tools such as job-sharing, but leave, however, open spaces for experimentation. The PerVET project lies in this space, exploring, as anticipated in the previous newsletters, the potential of a new figure supporting reconciliation policies: the personal facilitator, a high skilled person who, inside private companies and public bodies, can help both working people and companies to improve the quality of working environment and the quality of services.

The end result of the project is a survey, published in English on the project web-site and translated in its essential parts into the national languages of the partners' organizations.

In the overall document, which is the result of the survey and analysis work developed both as a selection of sources and as a collection of data from questionnaires and interviews, the subject of reconciliation has been explored both at European level and in the three partner countries. The definition of the context is then followed by the results of the interviews conducted locally in the three countries to support the final elaboration of the parameters of the new proposed curriculum.

Interviews involved around 300 people, one hundred in each partner country, divided into three different target groups: employers, employees and VET providers. The results, collected and analyzed by country and also as a whole, have allowed a closer look at how the new professional figure can positively impact the people's lives and the efficiency of companies and have been used as the basis for the definition of the curriculum.

The definition of the curriculum represents the ultimate step of the project, but is at the same time a starting point. The well-being of people, the opportunity for a job that meets their needs and the balance between working life and personal life are very contemporary themes and in this field there is some space for an extensive experimentation that can and should be explored.

We have faced the challenge and worked in this direction, outlining one of the many possible ways.

The Survey and the Curriculum are available on the project website: visit it to download them.

The multiplier events

The project multiplier events took place on 12 July 2017.

We decided to host very small events selecting carefully the participants in order to have people really interested in the topic and able to bring the results of the research and the new curriculum definition in local policies.

ProEduca hosted the Czech multiplier event. Bluebook hosted the Italian one and Panevėžys Labour Market Training Center the Lithuanian one.

The three project multiplier events have taken place on the same day, at the same time. Czech, Lithuania and Italy have been connected by video-conference.

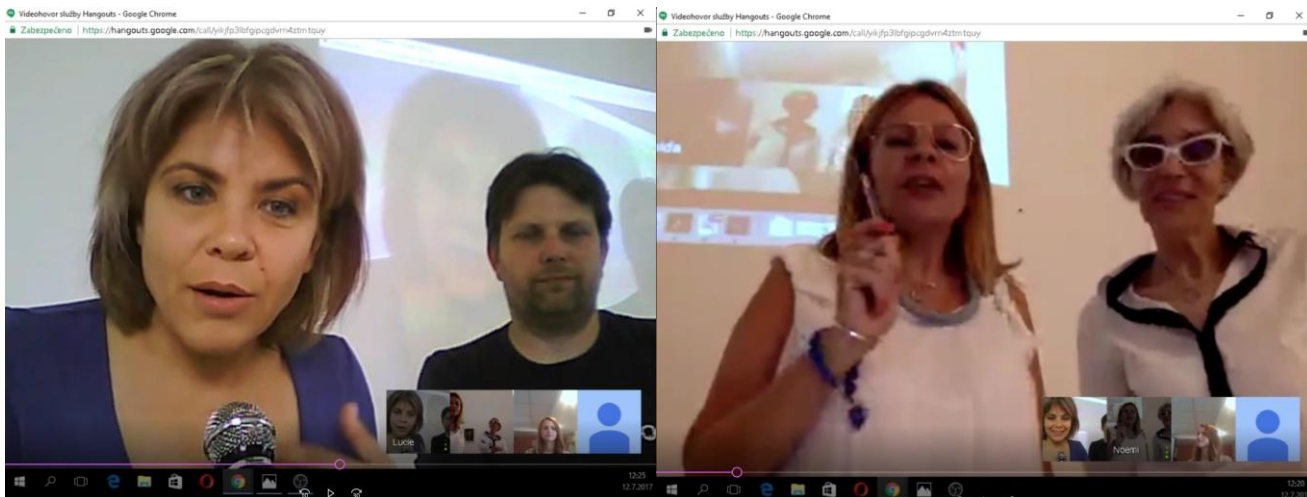

The aims of the three multiplier events have been:

1. to spread the results improving the project international breath
2. to involve local decision makers and the stakeholder network of each partner country
3. to share the project intellectual output
4. to explore new cooperation fields among the participants.

The three meetings have been carried out in a high interactive way for facilitating collaborative dialogue and the sharing of knowledge and ideas to create a living network of conversation and action. Bluebook LTD, as being responsible for the project dissemination as a whole, coordinated the implementation of the communication media to be used for the multiplier events.

The event have been be a medium to present the project and its outcomes, to deal a debate on new strategies and new curricula in training as a tool for continuing VET, to elaborate a cooperation plan for the further exploitation of the project outcomes.

Here are some pictures to remember our multiplier events.

The Czech meeting, took place in České Budějovice, in Galerie R51 and the Lithuanian one in Panevėžys, in hotel Smėlynė.

The Italian first section of Bluebook’s multiplier event has been focused on Erasmus+: we invited Mr. Iskender Forioso from ERI, European Research Institute, to present the Programme, its current and future challenges.

The Italian event has been closed with the filling of evaluation form “on air” through google forms.

After the meeting. In Torino the multiplier event took place at the Ettore Fico Museum and after the meeting we visited, together with some of our hosts, the museum.

During the last working table section of the multiplier events we discussed, together, the following topics: new brand names for the professional, tools for his/her promotion within enterprises and VET providers and further steps for the project development.

So we are ready to carry on, with you!
